Sport Skills for Employment

Project

This project aims to contribute to European employability policies through sport, evaluating, classifying and valuing the learning and skills acquired in the different types, objectives and modalities of sports practice.

The main target group in this project is youth that do sport, since it is to them that the proposed actions are directed. Secondly, policymakers in the field of sport and youth are also the target of this proposal, since the pilot experience that this project will entail will generate knowledge based on experience on which to decide strategies and actions.

Activities

- Survey to athletes: Sport values for employment in youth questionnaire
- Survey to employers: Stakeholders employability & sport on-line questionnaire
- Booklet design
- Pilot Experience
- Dissemination Campaigning

MEETINGS:

- Virtual Meeting 1 (February)
- Transnational Project Meeting 1 (Spain, February)
- Transnational Project Meeting 2 (Portugal, June)
- Virtual Meeting 2 (November)
- Transnational Project Meeting 3 (Spain, June)

Results

One of the main conclusions refers to the role that competitive sport has in the acquisition and/or development of soft skills, which differentiates it, with its pros and cons, from recreational sport and above all from so-called health sport or sport for all. This should direct public policies on employability and sport towards this practice with commitment, which requires dedication and means, not so much among top-level sportsmen and women but among young sportsmen and women
